

EVERYDAY LIFE AND THE “RECONSTRUCTION” OF SOVIET RUSSIA DURING
AND AFTER THE GREAT PATRIOTIC WAR, 1943–1948

Jeffrey W. Jones

CONTENTS

From the Series Editors

Acknowledgments

Introduction

“Everything here will have to change”

Chapter One

“Everything has to be rebuilt from scratch in this country, starting with our own Rostov”:
The Impact of the Great Fatherland War

Chapter Two

“I will have to hang myself now—life has become simply impossible”: Living Conditions
during “Reconstruction”

Chapter Three

“When will that ‘near future’ finally arrive?”: The Myth of “Reconstruction” and the “Politics of Productivity”

Chapter Four

“When will we be able to feed our children?":
National Identity, Gender, and Soviet “Family Rhetoric”

Chapter Five

“Every family has its freak”:
Perceptions of Collaboration in Occupied Soviet Russia

Chapter Six

“People Without A Definite Occupation”:
The Illegal Economy and “Speculation”

Chapter Seven

“What sort of democracy is this?":
Political Rhetoric, Popular Perceptions, and Soviet Elections

Chapter Eight

“Right now you can’t get anything done without a bribe”: Problems in and Perceptions of the Soviet Communist Party

Conclusion

“In my opinion, this is all a fraud!”

Bibliography

Index